OVERSEAS investors and delegates descended on Tasmania's North and North-West yesterday to kick off the long-awaited TasInvest site visits.

First cab off the rank was a potential $100 million eco-tourism development overlooking the Tamar River.

TD

Craggy Ridge, near Grindelwald, includes accommodation, a function centre, whisky distillery and an abundance of open space.

The 63ha development is expected to incorporate activities that highlight the region's strengths such as food, wine tasting and guided nature walks.

Shanghai Strategical Investment Management company president Daniel Lee said his clients were looking at agribusiness so that produce could be exported to China.

"This business model would be very good," he said.

Mr Lee said Chinese visitors liked the clean environment in Tasmania. Meanwhile, Yunnan Tin Australia Investment Holding Company managing director Qubo Li was one of 12 Chinese delegates in Burnie to hear more about potential investment opportunities and tour Grange Resources' iron ore pellet factory at Port Latta.

After being introduced to some of Tasmania's finest food and drink, including Hellyers Road whisky and King Island and Lactos cheese at Burnie's Makers' Workshop, they were ready to learn more about our mining and exploration sector. Mr Li's company has a 50 per cent stake in Renison Bell tin mine near Zeehan.
