Embattled drilling group says recovery over a year away, secures $US342m bailout plan.

Boart Longyear says a recovery in demand for its drilling services could be more than a year away, as it secured the final piece of a $US342 million ($419 million) bailout plan.

Investors overwhelmingly supported the final $US84m equity piece of Boart Longyear's massive private equity recapitalisation package at a special meeting on Wednesday.

"This provides the company with the capability to make it through what will continue to be a challenging market for 2015, maybe into 2016," chief executive Richard O'Brien told AAP.

The company may experience a further fall in the use of its drilling rigs as gold and copper exploration continues to dry up, he said.

"There's a possibility that we could, if we see gold prices fall significantly," Mr O'Brien said.

Boart Longyear has 60 per cent of its business in gold and copper exploration.

A global recovery could come as late as 2016, with copper, nickel and other infrastructure-related metals suffering amid reduced demand in China, Mr O'Brien said.

And he predicted a "gentle upslope" in recovery, rather than a v-shaped recovery.

"We don't need a v-shaped recovery, we just need a recovery," he said.

The world's biggest drilling services company expects to achieve $US30m in earnings in calendar 2014, below the range of $US34m to $US48m previously expected by analysts.

It has been hit hard by the sharp downturn in the mining services sector, leaving it struggling to cope with more than $US500m in debt.

Mr O'Brien said the completion of the recapitalisation plan from Centerbridge Partners would reduce net debt to $US450m.

The company plans to make its first debt repayment of $US300m in 2018, followed by a $US120m payment in 2020 and a $US285m payment in 2021.

The company's shares dropped two cents to 16 cents, down from more than 30c a year ago and $1.45 in December 2012.
