The controversial former boss of Leighton Holdings, Wal King, will replace George Jones as chairman of iron ore aspirant Sundance Resources.

Mr King joined the Sundance board as a director in May and since that time he has seemed destined to take one of the top jobs at the company.

TD

Sundance has been trying to develop an iron ore deposit on the border of Cameroon and the Republic of Congo for five years, but has been thwarted by tragedy and corporate disappointments. The company lost its entire board in a plane crash in 2010, and then was jilted at the takeover alter in 2013 by controversial Chinese group Sichuan Hanlong.

Hanlong, some of whose members have since been shrouded in a corruption probe, strung Sundance along for 18 months before finally conceding it could not muster the $1.4 billion it needed for the acquisition.

Now a mere 8¢ stock, Sundance looms as a major challenge for Mr King given the continuing collapse in iron ore prices.

But the company still has some big names involved, including Ukrainian billionaire Gennadiy Bogolyubov who punted $40 million into Sundance via a convertible note and option deal earlier this month. Mr Bogolyubov is no stranger to iron ore, having been an early investor in BC iron before selling out last year having increased his stake 16-fold.

Mr King's involvement with Sundance continues his shift into iron ore, having also worked as a consultant on the Sino iron magnetite project since his departure from Leighton Holdings.
