IN a $37 million move, one of China's biggest textile manufacturing companies has snapped up two of Victoria's most prized pastoral properties in the fine merino heartland of the Western District.

The deal, shrouded in secrecy and confidentiality clauses, is the first step by the Zhejiang RIFA Holding Group towards establishing an elite merino sheep and fine wool empire in Australia.

A former state-owned machinery company, RIFA has signed contracts to buy the historic 2400ha Blackwood property near Dunkeld from the Ritchie family for about $14m.

It has also signed a heads of agreement contract to buy one of the biggest and most productive grazing properties in western Victoria, the 2850ha "Minjah" aggregate at Woolsthorpe north of Warrnambool for $23m from farmer and lamb exporter Tim Clarke.

The RIFA group is also understood to be negotiating to buy a third Western district pastoral estate and its 26,000 merino sheep, Banongil Station at Sipton, for more than $20m from former VFL footballer turned Ballarat property developer Stewart Gull.

Other grand pastoral holdings close to Naracoorte, South Australia, are also believed to be under consideration for acquisition by the RIFA group.

News of RIFA's surprise move comes in the same week as Hong Kong investors announced the $70m purchase of Australia's sixth-biggest dairy processor, United Dairy Power.

The little-known RIFA group is in the process of transforming itself from a Chinese government textile and loom-making machinery company to an "independent" corporation with a focus on precision machinery, investment, sports and agriculture.

It is not yet clear whether RIFA's ambitious rural play will require the approval of the federal government and the Foreign Investment Review Board.

While both deals are below the current threshold value of $248m -- which triggers automatic FIRB review of private corporate newcomers -- Zhejiang RIFA's original status as a Chinese state-owned machinery enterprise and its unclear current ownership structure may attract the mandatory FIRB scrutiny of all foreign government or sovereign entities buying Australian farmland.

On its website, the RIFA Holding Group claims to have eight subsidiaries, 1500 staff and to be worth more than 10 billion yuan ($1.9 billion).

It is also understood to own more than three million sheep in China -- although none are merinos -- in its agricultural holdings.

Blackwood and Minjah will be used by RIFA to breed and showcase the thousands of fine-woolled merino sheep that the company is expected to acquire.
